Mr. Fiske, the American Consul at Leith, Scotland, has been arrested by the British authorities.

Yesterday afternoon's session. The society met yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A resolution to the following effect was presented and adopted.

That while all that relates to the general management of hospitals, the accommodation, board, comfort, etc., of the patients appertains, legitimately, to the managers of these institutions, the subject of medical instruction is, properly, neither within their province nor within that of the contributors, but, in right and in courtesy, belongs, with all its accessories, exclusively to the medical staff.

By permission of the society Dr. Gross explained that in his speech of the morning he had stated that Drs. Hartshorne, Stille, Morton, and Weir Mitchell held consulting professorships in the Woman's Medical College, and were also members of the County Medical Society.

He had since been informed that this was not true of Drs. Morton and Mitchell, one of whom had never been a member of the County Society, and the other having resigned before joining the Woman's College.

He regretted his mistake, and with great pleasure made this correction. After the passage of resolutions of thanks, the society adjourned to meet in Williamsport, Pa., on the second Wednesday in June, 1871.

Musical and Dramatic. "Lurline" by the Hethings Troupe. The performance of Wallace's opera of Lurline last evening for the benefit of Mrs. Bernard, attracted a very good audience notwithstanding the extremely disagreeable state of the weather.

The libretto is based upon the same theme as the once favorite spectacular drama of The Maid Queen—almost the only spectacular piece, by the way, produced of late years, that has the merit of being at all poetical in subject or treatment—but it is by no means as good an arrangement.

The Maid Queen would make a very good opera to look almost as it stands, and it is to be regretted that the composer did not use it instead of attempting to procure a new version of the story. Lurline is intended for a spectacular opera, and the entire absence of any spectacular effects last evening was one of the chief drawbacks to the enjoyment of the audience.

The music is marked by all the characteristics of Wallace's style, and with its sweet, plaintive, and graceful melodies it is well calculated to please the public taste, and if brought out with good stage effects the opera ought to be a valuable addition to the repertoire of any troupe. The performance last evening was scarcely up to the highest mark of excellence, and with the exception of Mrs. Bernard, who sang the role of "Lurline" with fine expression, and Mr. Drayton, who made a capital representative of "Rhinberg," there was very little to commend.

This afternoon the season will close with a performance of Martha. At THE WALNUT Mr. Jefferson will appear this afternoon and evening as "Rip Van Winkle." AT THE ARCH the Bryant troupe will give an attractive minstrel performance this evening.

AT THE CHESTNUT variety entertainments will be given this afternoon and evening, when the present troupe will conclude its engagement. We hear that Miss Laura Keane is engaged in writing a book on the stage, which will doubtless contain many rich, rare, and racy items. Her experiences as manager of the Chestnut Street Theatre will furnish the materials for some curious and edifying chapters. We shall look for Miss Keane's book with impatience.
